

ABSTRACT

The invention concerns an integrated monolithic electronic component for connection to a telecommunications network and data exchange in accordance with a part at least of the Internet protocols, characterized in that said component includes an architecture of the DSP (Digital Signal Processor) type.